

Question 10

1 has this property, since the only positive integer not exceeding 1 is 1, and therefore the sum is 1. Therefore, there exists a positive integer that equals the sum of the positive integers not exceeding it.

This is a constructive proof.